Chapter 1 by Melotoxin

Lily smiled at the man, her wand in hand, pointing at his face. "Tell me, will you take my offer? Or will you die here and now?"

The man trembled, "I accept."

Chapter 2 by SaintSayaka

What is the little demon girls offer?

As far as Lily could remember, she had always had a gift with men.

Her dad had been planning on skipping out on the family when she was born, until he saw her face. She knew that because she strangled the answer out of him fifteen years later, before finally letting him die. He had been out drinking at the village inn even though he promised her mother he wouldn't touch another drop of ale. His mistake. He should have made that promise to her.

Boys had no problems emptying their pockets to serenade her with gifts. Sometimes before they even bought food

"Become my husband," she said to the man again, slower, ensuring that he understand the terms of their agreement. "so that I may go about my business unhindered again."

She might have had a control over men, but she didn't have a control over women, and social expectations. Lily, while childlike in appearance, was a woman. And women were supposed to marry men. Women certainly weren't supposed to spend their days gallivanting across the continent, flirting with other women and "convincing" men to foot her bills.

This man could prove to be some decent insurance to that end...
